6. In a society to have good governance, the law and order maintaining machinery play a vital role. Law and order administration provides peace and stability in the society which is very much important for the overall balanced development of the country.

In India, "law and order" lies on the state list, maintaining "public order" is the concurrent list.

At central level following are the agencies involved in maintaining law and order:

(i) Organisations involved at the field level:

- Para-military forces like BSF, CISF, IPS, CRPF

Armoured forces play an important role in case of occurrence of violence, riot, disaster in the country. In 2003 NSG was established to deal with terrorist acts.

These forces are deployed by the centre to the states either on their request or in case of grave emergency.
(i) Staff agencies involved:

CBI plays an important role in investigating various criminal cases related to finance, economy, murder etc.

RAW (Research analysis wing) collects data & information related to national security & provides it to the concerned ministries.

Intelligence Bureau collects domestic info related to various offenses.

(ii) Research bodies like Department of police research & development, national intelligence centre helps in assessing the threat and co-ordinating the various concerned agencies for the required action.

Now various law & order maintaining body at state level are as follows:

(i) State police machinery
(ii) Central intelligence department

Special police force

CID collects data & information related to various offences and co-ordinates with other agencies in preventing, detecting the crimes.

Special police force are created at state level for particulars purpose. Like in where it was created for anti-terror operation.

But in the era of complex technological development both the central & state level agencies have to be proactive, sensitive & responsive in maintaining the peace & stability in the society.
In India policing function is present since ancient times. Ashoka, chaunayaga, Maurya they were having efficient policing system.

During Mughal period for maintaining of Munsabat system police system was in use.

But during British period to protect the promote the interest of Britishers the police force was created. The police force was loyal to the British administration not to the citizens.

After 1857 revolt to suppress these type of movements IPC 1860 & Indian police act-1861, CRPC were enacted. The police force was very much oppressive, exploitative and corrupt.

After Independence we inherited the same pattern with some minor changes. now the police was made accountable to the rule of law.
The inherited legacy can be divided into structural legacy and behavioural legacy.

- LG system
- Dual accountability of police head SP (i.e. to LG & DM)
- IPC, CrPC, IPA

Even after independence, few structural changes have happened. Like in metro cities (Delhi, Mumbai, Chennai, Kolkata), the commissionerate system started where police is accountable and answerable to their hierarchical superiors.

Various amendments in CrPC, CrPE has been done to make it more democratic in nature.

The very first national police commission recommended for structural and functional autonomy to the police system by creating state police security commission which will look into transfer, promotion etc to reduce political interference.
In many states for modernisation and skill development of police various programmes are running.

For IPS officers, their training system has been tuned to the global pattern. They are sent to foreign countries for learning the current pattern of technology & ideas which can be implemented in maintaining law & order.

For the welfare of police, AR&F has recommended for providing insurance system like defence personnel which has been initiated by Tamil Nadu & Maharashtra govt.

For behavioural changes in their professional, personal & competence, one being enhanced by various training & skill development process to make them tuned to community service.

Community policing has started in India (Kerala, NH) where citizen feel sense of ownership, police-public relation is improving.
Our Indian policing system is very much similar to the British pattern of colonial time.

According to Justice A.M. Mullah, "Indian police is the organised gang of armed criminals. No self-respected citizen want to be associated to the police in any context." 19

George Bernard Shaw commented, "Anarchism is a game which can be definitely won the police." Since independence various committees have been set up for the police reform. The very first committee was set up by Janata govt in 1977 - the national police commission. But the next govt didn't consider the recommendation & set up new commission. Various committees like Julio Robins Committee, Malimath Committee etc were set up.
But most of the recommendations of these committees have been kept in cold storage where it is biting the dust.

Most of the recommendations of all the committees are same. The administrative reform committee-2008 recommended following reforms

(i) repeal Ipc and make a new code.
(ii) investigative agencies should be separate
(iii) creation of police performance & accountability commission which will monitor the performance & ensure the accountability.
(iv) state police complaint authority & dist police complaint authority should be created to redress the grievances of citizens.
(v) They should be modernised with cutting edge equipments & technology.
(vi) fire system should be made more citizen friendly.
(v) Ethical & moral training should be given to them.
(vi) Personal security to SP and above officers.
(vii) Appointment of DGP should be made unpolitical in nature.

Currently various initiatives have been taken by various state police forces in making it citizen friendly.

Like in Delhi citizen can raise their grievances on Facebook page of Delhi Police.

Community policing is the need of the hour which can make police more accessible to the citizens & the trust deficit pattern can be reduced.
disaster is defined as "any vulnerability which arises due to natural or man-made cause and leads to loss of life, damage of assets & property." so when vulnerability meets hazards it becomes disaster. Disaster can be of various type:

- natural disaster
  - earthquake
  - flood
  - drought
  - landslide

- man-made disaster
  - chemical disaster
  - industrial disaster
  - biological

In India, 60% of the land is under earthquake prone zone. Around 20% of the total land is flood prone & 68% of the cultivable land is drought prone. Hence in order to address these issues govt enacted national disaster

The main provision of NDM Act is to have creation of disaster management authority at centre, state & district level.

(i) Creation of national disaster response fund & national disaster response force.

To reduce the risk of disasters various provisions are as follows

@ Preparedness: To be prepared to counter the disasters by properly following the building code. Currently govt is having special focus in RAY, JAY that the building constructed must be disaster resilient.

(ii) Prevention: For prevention the forestation program & ecologically sensitive has being followed.

(iii) Mitigation

(iv) Quick response & rehabilitation scheme.

So to make the response framework more imperative Governmental Thinking is changing - earlier the mindset was management of disaster not disaster management. But now government has initiated various activities to make the response framework more imperative by associating with the local self-government institutions, CSOs, NGOs for collecting knowledge, information, and data.

Disaster management can be more effective in networked approach. Govt is using satellite communication for early detection and early warning of disaster.

In coastal areas with the help of GIS, local community are being informed about the threats.

Currently government has proposed a bill for fast adjudication of cases related to man-made disasters & the damage should be paid by the individual who is responsible for it.

Mega drills events are conducted to make the citizens more prepared & aware to counter the disasters.
5. (a) The 73rd & 74th Constitutional amendment act led to democratic decentralisation and devolution of power.

District planning and development board has been created under 73rd CAA in various states. The appointment & selection of the members are done by state government, there is no uniform law for that.

The functions of DPDB are as follows:

@ Consolidate the plans of Panchayats, ZP and municipalities and forward it to state planning board.
@ to assist Panchayats in formulating plans.
@ to co-ordinate b/w different agencies present at district level.
@ to formulate developmental plans for the dist.

But the DPDB has not being very much successful because of politically influenced appointment, lack of skilled & trained officials, inadequate finances.
so to make it a functional organisation it is very much pertinent that the appointment of members should be merit based, proper framework should be formulated for training, skill development.

Delineation of function is also important at unit level to make it effective, responsive & efficient.
The idea of local self government (village republic) of Gandhiji has got the constitutional mandate by 73rd & 74th constitutional amendment act.

But democratic decentralisation by this act is only the necessary step not the sufficient.

Various problems encountered in making democratic decentralisation in reality in India are as follows:

1) Lack of fund: PRIs & Panchayats have inadequate resources. Principle of subsidiarity is not followed by the state in its true spirit.

The fund obtained through taxes & levies are meagre. Most of the centrally sponsored programmes are having tied fund.

2) Lack of functional: PRI depends on the state govt officers for their functioning. The officers dominate the PRI functions, they are indifferent towards the needs of PRI.
6. Lack of function: All the function has not been transferred to PRIs & ULBs by the state.

7. Proxy candidature: In many villages, proxy candidature are relevant. There is separation of authority from control.

8. Lack of proper meeting of Gram Sabha

Art. 2 has recommended to strengthen the fund, functionary & function of the PRIs & ULBs. By having a cadre for PRIs, increasing tax base, borrowing money from market, applying vertical & horizontal linkages to make the community face more economically sound, has been started in various places.
Community policing is not a new concept. It has been mentioned in Arthasastra. The system of Panch during Mughal time was very much effective. But in the era of LFG the notion of community policing is changed. It has become necessary in the current scenario to bridge the trust deficit between the citizens and the police.

There is a sense of ownership in the citizens and also the sense of belongingness in the community police. It provides important information related to crimes to the state police officials which help in preventing and detecting the crime.

But the major problem in community policing in LSA are as follows:

(a) Elite capture
(b) Lack of awareness in the citizen
(c) Lack of govt prompt initiative
(iii) government mimicking community policing for its vested interest like in case of Chhattisgarh SALWA JADUM.

Hence in order to have a vibrant public-police relation, community police will be the linking pin which will help in maintaining law and order and preventing crime.
Administrative reform refers to reform in the structure of the organisation & in the behaviour of the administrator to make the organisation more efficient, effective & responsive.

But in India where economic and social independence started after the political development the reforms are the product of various crises not an advanced planning. Various committees have been formed for police reform but it did not deter the political unwillingness. The bureaucrats & the political masters don't want to lose their power by the reforms.

Economic reforms started only when the country met the crisis/financial crunch in 1990s. For civil service reforms various committees have recommended for amending act 311 & 2309 but the govt didn't hear.

Here piece meal approach is followed because the ministers don't want to take any risk which can throw him out of the ministry. Reforms happen on parochial & provincial lines or for the vote bank politics.

But in order to be a vibrant democratic country the administrative reform must be rational & pragmatic in its approach, which will address the issues & challenges confronting the society.
In India around 68.1% people live in rural areas and around 56.1% workforce is engaged in agricultural and allied activities though agricultural accounts only for 16% of GDP.

Rural development means providing all the social and physical infrastructure to have a happy and dignified life.

In India since independence most of the policies related to rural areas are related to agriculture like CDP, national extension service, target area based approach. But since UPA govt has prioritised other sectors too like education, health, social security. Programmes like MNREGS, NRHM, NRHM are converting the life of the people into prosperous and happy family. The project like Bharat Nirman & PURA are changing the face of rural India and making it modernised.
Human rights are those rights which are inalienable and inherent in nature.

so to protect human right

NHRC was created in 1993 by executive ordinance and passed by legislature in 1995.

NHRC has a member and one chairman. Chairman should be retired CJI and appointed by president.

NHRC has the power of civil court. It can interfere in any legal proceedings concerned with human rights violations.

It can recommend for temporary relief to victims, compensation or for the penalty to the alleged. It promotes NACD and CSD for making citizens aware of human rights.

But since for investigation process, NHRC depends on the state machinery and many times state machinery is itself violator of human rights like custodial death, torture etc.
The recommendation of NHRC is advisory in nature. It doesn't have a technical support wing.
2. (b)

A vibrant & friendly relationship between citizen and the administration is very much important for good governance.

Variuos type of citizen-administration relationship can be as follows:

(i) clientele relation : Here the administration treat citizens as client. They pay user charge for the service.

(ii) regulator : Here govt regulate each & every activity of the state.

(iii) protester : Here citizen-govt relation is not friendly. Like in case of Bhag where the government was dictator people revolted.

(iv) participative relationship : Here government consult the citizen in decision making process. People can actively participate in the nation building approach.
In the current era of LSG where govt is only one of the service providers, its role has shifted from regulator to facilitator or the enabler entity.

Here the interface between the citizen & administration has become more transparent, friendly because of RTI act 2005, citizen charter initiatives.

Various states like Bihar, MP, RJ has enacted delivery of public service in time bound frame, which has provided opportunity & challenges to the admin.

E-governance has made the interface more transparent and accessible.

In the era of democratic decentralisation where citizens are becoming more assertive & empowered the administrator has to be proactive, sensitive and imbued with the ethos of community service.
2. a) As Lord Acton says "power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely" corruption can be defined as misuse of power & authority for vested interest.

The various causes of corruption in our society can be fellows:

D) Historical cause:
Because of British legacy where the officials were having high discretionary power resulted into corruption & oppressive system.

E) Political cause:
In India "the great year of divide-1967" when coalition govt started to state led to criminalisation of politics & politicisation of criminals, money & muscle power were used in winning election through bribes, threats.

C) Economic cause:
Due to economic poverty, high rate of unemployment, inadequate remuneration.
Social cause: Corruption has got the acceptance of the society.

Administrative cause: It is because of administrative discretion, administrative adjudication & administrative legislation. So in order to mitigate corruption we must have a systemic as well as systematic approach to deal.

After the recommendation of S. Santhanam committee, Central Vigilance Commission was created to deal with corruption related cases. Prevention of Corruption Act was passed in 1988.

ARC-2 has recommended following to mitigate corruption:

1. Art 311 should be amended so that civil servants can be removed by the president in corruption cases.

2. CVC should be consulted only in the final stage of investigation related to ex-minister corruption cases of bureaucrats.

Consultation with CVC should be done away.
(iv) Creation of Lokpal & Lokayukt and giving it teeth to deal with the corrupt officers.

(v) Computerisation & e-bidding of tenders to bring transparency & remove discretion.
